Japanese students are encouraged to develop their English skills in a variety of ways. At the school, students are assigned to English classes from the first year of high school. Among the students, the majority are learning English through the use of English textbooks, while the rest are learning through a variety of other methods, such as English clubs and English Corner. The school also offers English classes for students who need extra help with their English skills.

The school has a unique approach to education, focusing on a combination of traditional and modern teaching methods. In addition to the standard curriculum, the school also offers courses in computer science, which is a popular choice among students.

In conclusion, the school's approach to education is unique and effective. By combining traditional and modern teaching methods, the school is able to provide a well-rounded education that prepares students for success in the global economy.