Days at Selkirk College in British Columbia Canada as a teaching assistant. Today, the method is used in all English literature classes in a variety of schools throughout the world, including the United States, New Zealand and Singapore. Various programs are being taught in these countries, ranging from elementary school to high school levels. The Selkirk College students, who both teach and learn Japanese studies, spend 45 minutes a day in a classroom setting. The students are divided into groups of four and work on a variety of tasks, Monday through Friday, in a variety of subjects. Monday, for example, Culture and Literature and Tuesday, Language and Literature. On Wednesday, the students engage in a variety of activities.
